

Want a News Reporting Internship?

Noozhawk internships give college students the opportunity to write news stories, pitch stories, shadow our team of journalists, and learn how a local newsroom works. Interns will be assigned articles on community issues and events and are paid small stipends for published stories.

Internship requirements:

Student media experience and/or journalism-related coursework (such as classes in communications or professional writing).

Time commitment of at least five hours per week for the internship period.

How to apply:

Candidates should email their resumes and writing samples to Noozhawk Executive Editor Giana Magnoli at gmagnoli@noozhawk.com.

Writing samples can include work from classes, campus publications, student media, or previous internships.

Internship sessions:

Fall quarter (September-December)

Winter quarter (January-March)

Spring quarter (April-June)

Summer (June-August)

Journalism Job Opportunities

Noozhawk often hires early-career journalists, including recent college graduates, for staff writer positions and is always looking for freelance reporters in the community.
